> “Brian Bormann

> Resolved that contents of letter be noted and the Environmental Services Manager respond appropriately. A report to be prepared for the next meeting outlining costs of ticket machines.”

Investigations undertaken by Council’s Senior Compliance Officer with the Australian supplier of parking ticket machines, CHS Parking Systems, has revealed that the cost of each machine would be between $70,000 and $110,000 depending on available infrastructure, with additional ongoing software costs.

These ticket machines have been introduced in several highly visited tourist sites in the Eastern states, but the honesty system or manual ticket method (purchasing from designated selling points) are the most highly used systems within South Australia. Investigations of various methods adopted within South Australia is ongoing and a further report will be presented to the Work Group in due course.
